1. Mindmapping, generating ideas for an international project

Cees Brederveld, teacher NL

In order to start international project work it is very important to have a good and suitable project idea. However it may be difficult to define what students should do within the project. In this hands-on workshop, participants will learn a way to generate new ideas for future projects with the help of all group members and the use of mind mapping activities. Starting by comparing normal daily activities, which nobody considers to be special, you discover that if you share them with others they might give you a good starting point to define new projects.

Christina Crawley, CSS

This workshop offers you the possibility to get to know the different tools of eTwinning, which you can use when you run an international project.

3. Theatre improvisation

Marian van Vorstenbosch

This workshop is aimed at allowing the participants to utilize each other's offer to play a scene in a playful manner, to work together in a special way and to literally experience each other in a different role to the usual. Different game situations make it possible to enhance fantasy, use each other's ideas, look for the possibilities and thus build a scene together. The improvisations are introduced and facilitated by the teacher, their unique implementation is up to the participants. This workshop offers the possibility to experience a different form of communication, shift the boundaries and enjoy each other's surprising problem solving.
